RAILROADS:

After being captured near Columbia Saturday night, Thompson, who was a small sixteen-year-old negro, was taken through the country to his doom. The escorting party was joined by about fifty Columbians. On reaching Gaston couriers were dispatchad through the county to apprise the hunters of the welcome news and to locate known in Bangkok city. Archibald Sightler, who had begged them im.

The ordinary hanging was too quick a death. There must be some preliminary torture. Accordingly his back was bared and with powerful blows Sightler applied the lash to him with a mercliess hand.

Some fifty blows were laid on, while the boy was held down on the ground at full length, a rope being tied round his neck so that he could not make too much noise. His moans and splutterings were pitiful. When Sightler was exhausted a relative of Mrs. Sightler took his place and kept up the awful scourging. After that Sightler gave the boy several terrible kicks on the head and face, one of them knocking out an eyeball.

After a plow line, furnished by a woman, Meeting of French Ministers.

After a plow line, furnished by a woman, had been thrown over a limb, a sort of platform was made with cross-ties, and the rope was thrown around Thompson's neck.

It was seemingly impossible for him to arise from the ground after his terrible scourging, but he did so. His arms were tied, and he was told to mount the scaffold, which he did hurriedly and with apparent gladness, as if to get surcease from suffering. It was found that the platform was not high enough, so he was ordered down until it was rearranged, after which the boy again scrambled up in haste. The noose was put over his neck, and the hangman asked:

"Boys, is that all right?"
"Tie the knot down on his ear and see what he has to say," replied the crowd. The boy was accordingly asked if he was guilty and replied: "Yes, sir, me and Tom Preston and Handy Kaigler."

Slowly Strangled. One by one the ties were removed, and the boy let gradually down, so that there would be no neck breaking, and that he could hang there and strangle some. Thompson made efforts to seize the rope, and he finally clutched it with one hand.
"We don't want his neck broken," shouted the crowd, and the boy swung there several minutes, slowly strangling. The shooting party, consisting of about forty persons armed with guns and about thirty with armed with guns, and about thirty with pistols, then ranged themselves in line, about forty feet from the body, while those of the spectators who were not to shoot Sightler was given the first shot, and he sent a bullet crashing into the swinging body. It was three minutes past 8 o'clock as he shot. This was followed by a shower of bullets, until the body was punctured at About 250 shots were fired and several thousand leaden pellets must have gone into the body, for in some cases the farmers had as much as thirty-five buckshot in each barrel. They used breech-loaders and reloaded a half dozen times. The last shot cut the rope and the body fell to the ground.

Preston denied his guilt, but that had no effect. He was stripped and stretched across a log, and a hundred lashes with a buggy trace were laid upon his person. He relied and screamed at a terrific rate, and most piteously begged for mercy, but the nore he begged the harder the lashes were aid upon him. aid upon him.

At last he was taken to the same tree upon which the bloody, bullet-riddled body of Thompson hung. A platform of crossities was made and the rope was put around the same limb.

The platform was pushed away by degrees and the wretch was slowly strangled. The crowd did not shoot until he had hung several minutes. His body was then riddled with thousands of bullets, more than were given Thompson, for he was afflicted with a filthy disease.

The two ghastly bodies were left hanging, while the mob proceeded to arrange for the lynching of the third man in jail at Lexington court house.

JOHN WILKES BOOTH

The Hitherto Unpublished Statement

When a second and more peremptory mesage came directing me to appear before bey. On my way a third messenger was less than the chief of the detective corps, the noted Col. Baker. He returned, conucted me on board the steamer and usherished to know if I could identify the ody, and to go on deck and examine it acroughly and make my report. The body as on deck, completely concealed by a arpaulin cover, and Surg. Gen. Barnes and was on deck, completely concealed by a darpaulin cover, and Surg. Gen. Barnes and his assistants standing near it.

By his order the cover was removed, and, to my great astonishment, revealed a body in whose lineaments there was to me no resemblance of the man I had known in life! My surprise was so great I at once said to Gen. Barnes: "There is no resemblance in that corpse to Booth, nor can I believe it to be that of him. After looking at it for a few moments I asked: "Is there a scar upon the back of its neck?" He replied: "There is." I then said: "If that is the body of Booth let me describe the scar before it is seen by me," and I did so as to its position, its size and its general appearance so accurately as caused him to say: "You have described the scar as it looks, as you have described it, more like the cicatrix of a burn than that made by a surgical operation." The body being then turned, the back of the neck was examined, and my mark was unmistakably found by me upon it. And it being afterward, at my request, placed in a sitting position, standing and looking down upon it I was finally enabled to imperfectly recognize the features of Booth. But never in a human being had a greater change taken place, from the man whom I had seen in the vigor of life and health, as in that of the haggard corpse which was before me, in its yellow and discolored skin, its unkempt and matted hair, and that undergone.

The right lower limb was greatly conused and perfectly black from a fracture of one of the long bones of the leg.

An autopsy was then made by the assistants of Gen. Barnes, which proved that the bullet which had killed him had passed between two of the vertebrae of the neck, assing their fracture and legion of the The body was secretly and at night bur-d in the yard of the penitentiary, which was not generally known for some time

That great uncertainty was felt and that much doubt was expressed at the time of the death of Booth and long afterward as to the identity of his body is notorious. Nor need this create surprise, for although the circumstances connected with his capture all tended to corroborate the belief that he had been killed, yet on the body which was produced by his captors nearly every vestige of resemblance to the living man had disappeared. But the mark made by the scalpel during life remained indelible in death, and settled beyond all question at the time and all cavil in the future the identity of the man who had assassinated the President.

Meeting of French Ministers.

The meeting of ministers to consider Slam's unreserved acceptance of France's iltimatum was held in Paris at the Elysee between 5 and 7 o'clock last evening. President Carnot came from Marly-Le-Rol to preside. These members of the cabinet were present: Dupuy, premier; Poincarre, minister of education; Rieunier, minister of marine; Viette, minister of public works, and Develle, minister of commerce and colonies, and M. Delcasse, under secretary of state for colonies, telegraphed from the colonies, and M. Delcasse, under secretary of state for colonies, telegraphed from the country that they would support any action which the council hight take.

As far as can be ascertained M. Peytral, M. Guerin, Gen. Loizillon and M. Viger, the other absentees, offered no special excuses. Gen. Loizillon caused considerable comment by leaving the city yesterday morning for Mezieres, that he might attend the unveiling of the Bayard monument.

The cottages are putting on their camp adornments, flowers and ferns growing before almost every door, and all dwellers seem engaging in a rivalry as to who may make the most beautiful home.

The management continues to make necessary improvements, and if no ill luck befalls, the coming camp will be a memorable one. In order that the expenses of the camp be not burdensome upon the stockholders some persons have started a subscription to meet these expenses, and the present trustees have subscribed about one-third of the amount needed.

Almost daily we have one or more additional families settle among us, so that now nearly all of the cottages are occupied, and there are more strange faces along our avenues than ever before.

It used to be that each succeeding year brought to this place the same people, but now it seems changing, and those as deeply interested, but, perhaps, not so enthusiastic, gather here to carry on the work of their predecessors.
